Subject: Location of hog facilities

Jim,

There is no state requirement that imposes mandatory separation distances among hog facilities. This does not mean that separation is not important. Research has shown that airborne transmission is source of diseases among hogs, and adequate separation distances are an important biosecurity measure. For example, the deadly virus, porcine epidemic diarrhea, may be transmitted by air, <http://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC4347589/>

A six mile separation distance may be appropriate to avoid airborne transmission of certain diseases such as Aujeszky's virus, <http://www.thepigsite.com/pighealth/article/629/airborne-transmission-and-other-methods/>

The issue achieving adequate separation has been left to the private sector
