

Money Management Coaching

For individuals and families who struggle to make their money match the month, the UW-Extension office in Dodgeville offers individual conferences on budget issues. The confidential private meetings help participants learn about basic money management and how to analyze their own household's income and expenses. Specific information about spending patterns allows participants to identify gaps in their budgeting skills and to better handle their finances.

ELIGIBILITY

Am I Eligible? All adult residents of Iowa County are eligible for this free, confidential service.

BENEFITS

What Does An Individual Conference Offer? Individual conferences will help participants identify their personal short-term, medium and long-term goals; calculate their monthly net income; list fixed and flexible monthly expenses; and consider options for spending and saving. Additional individual conference topics can include banking basics, credit, and other topics by request.

PARTICIPATION

To make an appointment for a conference, call 608-930-9852, or go to the UW Extension office in the Iowa County Health & Human Services Building, 303 W Chapel St, Dodgeville, WI 53533.
