

Unemployment Insurance

Unemployment Insurance provides temporary cash assistance to qualified unemployed workers who are looking for a job. Benefits are based on past earnings, not on current income.

ELIGIBILITY

Am I Eligible? YOU MAY be eligible to receive Unemployment Insurance if:

- You are unemployed through no fault of your own;
- You have earned enough wages to qualify for benefits; and
- You are available and actively looking for full-time work.

If I Quit My Job, Can I Still Get Benefits?

QUITTING A job does not necessarily make you ineligible. Some reasons for quitting that may allow you to receive benefits include:

- Quitting with 'good cause' because an action of your employer leaves you no reasonable alternative. Examples are sexual harassment and directives to break the law.
- Quitting due to your health (or a family member's) when you have no reasonable alternative.
- Quitting due to a lack of child care after your employer transfers you to a different shift.
- Quitting after being transferred to a position paying less than 2/3 of your prior wage.

There are many other kinds of job loss that do not disqualify you. UI can give you more information.

How Much Work Experience Do I Need to Qualify?

ELIGIBILITY DEPENDS on your earnings during a 'base period' - which is a one-year period ending shortly before the date you file your claim. To qualify, you must have earned at least $1,325, as of April 2009, during a single quarter (three-month period) of your base period, at least four times your weekly benefit rate (see below) during the other three quarters, and have total base period wages equal to at least 30 times your weekly benefit rate.

BENEFITS

How Much Can I Receive?

BENEFITS ARE based on your earnings during your base period. In general, your weekly benefit rate will be about half of your average weekly earnings during the highest earning quarter of your base period. The maximum weekly benefit rate is $363 as of April 2009.

How Long Can I Get Benefits?

IN MOST CASES, you can get benefits for six months, as long as you are involuntarily unemployed. During periods of high employment, this may be extended. Some people with limited work history are only eligible for a shorter period.
